OUR SOLUTION

Each Williams-Scotsman office has to be a showcase for the product (modular buildings), the construction and design quality of the organization, the company as a whole, and it must function as an office. Williams chose Whitley to build this "marketing tool" of an office that needed to be designed to link with a site-built warehouse facility and be able to withstand heavy truck traffic as well.

Again, Williams turned to the company that they trusted most to provide them with a showcase building constructed with the finest materials. Williams wanted the building to be just as attractive in twenty years as it was on opening day. This project was a success and was awarded the "Best of Show" award by the Modular Building Institute. The two-story atrium features custom ceramic work, exotic woods, and exposed steel staircase, a glass curtain wall, and designer pendant lighting.
